Abstract

According to the APA Manual, an abstract is a brief, comprehensive summary of the contents of an article. It does not evaluate the content of an article, but rather accurately reports on the contents of an article. The abstract should be concise (150-250 words) and include the four or five most important concepts, findings, or implications. Appropriate attribution should be included in the abstract (APA, 2009).

Keywords: APA, citation, attribution
